With the new year upon us, many are beginning to think up goals for 2018. Canada too! The Trudeau government wants to unroll a new immigration plan next year that amounts to 1 million more immigrants in the next three years, reports Candice Malcolm. She continues by stating polls "reveal that confidence in immigration is down across the board." She acknowledges that Canadians as a people are welcoming, but the new "immigration agenda is a dangerous combination [as it calls for] more refugees, with less security and more immigration, but with less of a focus on integration and national unity." Read the complete article from the Toronto Sun, here.
