In this Infobae article, Martín Dinatale delves into the continuously evolving and highly contentious international mystery that is the research findings and death of the late Argentine prosecutor: Alberto Nisman. While exploring the concept of “fixers” and “super fixers”, Dinatale details the role that the Islamic Republic of Iran played in the highly controversial Memorandum of Understanding, and the ensuing alleged cover up by former Argentine President Cristina Fernández de Kirchner. In this riveting article on international powers influencing Latin American politics, cultural centers and industry, there is no shortage of intrigue surrounding a series of events spanning more than two decades. Who was Alberto Nisman? Who were these Iranian “fixers,” and what were they doing in Argentina? There is plenty to learn in this article.  Read the whole article, and uncover a story shrouded in mystery here.